

WAIT WORD ROMANIA JOINS WAR

EVEN BERLIN DISPATCHES ADMIT THAT POSSIBILITY IT WILL OCCUR IS IMMEDIATE.

RUSSIANS IN GREECE

With Italian Forces and Allied Army of French English and Serbs, the Advance Will Start Shortly.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Berlin, Aug. 22.—The Budapest West, which is usually well informed on the Roumanian situation, today prints a dispatch from its Bucharest correspondent saying the agitation for war has suddenly cooled down. It is stated that possibly the end of mobilization is responsible for the change, if not the serious words uttered in Hungarian parliament.

The first hint of Roumanian mobilization that has been permitted to pass allied censorship. Almost nothing of the Roumanian military situation from the entente viewpoint has come through since the Balkan situation in its present phase reached a critical stage.

Have Agreed.—All the morning papers coming at length on the possibility of Roumania joining in the war. The meetings that are in progress in Bucharest are taken to mean that all the various developments in the situation have been seriously considered, and the general tone of the comment is that the decisive moment for Roumania's action has arrived.

Wait Roumania.—All the morning papers coming at length on the possibility of Roumania joining in the war. The meetings that are in progress in Bucharest are taken to mean that all the various developments in the situation have been seriously considered, and the general tone of the comment is that the decisive moment for Roumania's action has arrived.

Claims Victories.—All the Serbian positions on the Maltia-Nizetlauka east of Benica, on the Macedonian front, have been captured by troops of the central powers, the war office announced today.

The French, adds the announcement, have been driven out of Buchovina and Tachinas.

Russian Gains.—The Russian army of the Caucasus has gained further ground from the Turks, occupying a considerable territory west of Lake Van in Armenia, the war office announced today.

On the main battle front in Galicia there is no change.

On the Somme.—British troops on the Somme front have advanced along a line a half mile further in the region of Pozieres, and have also made advance near the Leipsaig salient, it was officially announced today.

Claim Resistance.—The Russians are continuing efforts to force their way across the Carpathian to pass south of Kolomena, near the Bukovina border, but are meeting with effective resistance from the Russian troops there, according to the Austro-Hungarian statement of August 21.

Greeks Battling.—Greek troops have been fighting the Bulgarians in the vicinity of Soria since Sunday morning, says an Athens dispatch to the exchange Telegraph company.

Fighting General.—The fighting on the Salonika front is becoming more general, says Havas dispatch from the front yesterday at Salonika. In the Dorian section, Serbian troops have captured Fort Kaimakadar and Cucurud.

The heaviest fighting is on the front northeast of Salonika on the left bank of the Struma river, from Kavila to Durakli. On the western end of the front, the hostilities are confined for the most part to artillery.

Large Army.—The Italian contingent of troops landing at Salonika is of greatly important proportion, according to information here. In addition to the troops in its review of the military situation today, alludes to the presence of Russian troops along the Vardar river, which, it confirmed, would make five allied contingents engaged in the entente campaign in the Balkans.

The announcement of the landing of the Italian troops at Salonika, it is reported here, is of considerable importance, indicating an important reinforcement of the already large army of entente allies, composed mainly of French, British and Serbian troops.

Means Agreement.—The Italian movement also is construed as showing that comprehensive political agreements have been arranged in advance, as hitherto it was understood Italy withheld from participation in the Balkan campaign, out of consideration for Greek sensitivities over the predominance of their influence in the eastern Mediterranean.

The participation of the Italians in the Balkan campaign also is considered another evidence of the international spirit prevailing among the allies, and is compared to the sending of the Russian contingent to France. By the movement the allies are distributing their effectiveness far beyond their own border.

Russians Arrive.—An Athens, Aug. 22, via London.—An Italian brigade of Russian troops has arrived at Salonika to join the entente allies in the fighting in the Balkans.

The arrival of Russians has created a profound impression here. Even the Royalists, who opposed participation in the war by Greece in the side of the entente allies, seemed almost stunned by the news that Russian troops had arrived to take part in the campaign, which under other conditions might have been taken by the Greek army.

WILL VETO NEW BILLS AS PASSED

Causes Uneasiness.
The general feeling here is that the bringing in of Russian troops has definitely dispelled the dream of a greater Greece which was conceived a year and a half ago, by the then Premier Venizelos, who carried Greece well on the way toward entrance in the war with the entente allies.

It is regarded as possible that the presence of Russian forces in Macedonia will effect a change in the attitude of Bulgaria. In same quarters it is believed that the recent foreign policy of the Greek government, which is said to have overlooked the interest of this nation.

German Report.
Berlin, wireless to Sayville, Aug. 22.—Official announcement is made by Sofia war office that on August 15, the Bulgarian left wing began a general offensive, advancing in the Struma valley, occupying Demli, Hissar and establishing their own left bank of the Struma, after repulsing the British and French near Sere.

French Advance.
Paris, Aug. 22.—Progress was made by the French last night on the Somme front north of the river in the outskirts of Clary, the war office announced today. South of the river the French captured trenches near Estrees and Soyecourt.

Official Announcement of British Says That German Boat Was Sunk by Submarine.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Aug. 22.—A British official announcement this afternoon says it is believed a German battleship of Nassau class has been sunk by British submarine E-22.

The announcement follows: The submarine E-22, Lieutenant Commander Robert R. Turner, which returns today from the North Sea, reports that on the morning of Saturday last, she made a successful attack upon a German battleship of the Nassau class. The commanding officer reports that the ship was being escorted by five destroyers, back to harbor in a damaged condition, and attacked and struck her with a second torpedo and believes she was sunk.

The Nassau class of battleships comprises four vessels with a displacement of 18,602 tons, a length of 451 feet, and beam eighty-eight feet.

Milwaukee, Aug. 22.—The Milwaukee Journal's staff correspondent with the Wisconsin troops at Camp Wilson, San Antonio, Texas, wired today that when private Frank Blinder, "B" company, Milwaukee, received a telegram announcing the death of his mother, members of the company hurried about to get a fund to pay his railroad fare to Milwaukee.

The men had not been paid, and there was not enough money in the company. Chaplain Gustav Stearns was appealed to, and with the approval of Colonel Joachim the chaplain furnished it out of that taken in at the canteen. Blinder will reach Milwaukee in time to attend the funeral. The Milwaukee troops have been resting for two days following the battle from Leon Springs and the severe experiences in the storm.

WAR GAME IS PLAYED OFF COAST

"RED" AND "BLUE" FLEETS TO HAVE MANEUVERS LASTING UNTIL SEPTEMBER FIRST.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Supposed Transports Will Seek to Land Troops and Defeat the Vessels Defending the Coast.

Washington, Aug. 22.—A "red" enemy fleet of great strength conveying thirty transports laden with an invading army arrived within 600 miles of the Atlantic coast at 6 o'clock this morning and the greatest war game ever undertaken by the navy department, began.

Within an hour, the twelve battleships of the "blue" defending fleet, were speeding to leave behind a far flung line of destroyers and scouts, intent upon locating and destroying the enemy before he approached the shore.

Admiral Mayo commands the "red" fleet of fifteen battleships, six destroyers, representing scouting line, and six other navy craft representing the "blue" fleet. The "red" fleet is made up of transports and other ships. Rear Admiral Helm has command of the "blue" fleet, and is supported by fifteen submarines as a last line of naval defense.

Rear Admiral Knight, president of the navy war college, aboard the superdreadnaught Pennsylvania, will umpire the game in which seventy-seven fighting crafts are engaged. Two reserve battleships forming the "blue" fleet main line, are manned by naval militia and civilian volunteers.

Admiral Mayo has until September 1 to effect a landing at any point between Cape Hatteras and East Port, Maine. The scene of action extends 600 miles to sea, between those points.

For the purpose of the game, the navy department was placed on a war footing this morning.

In the office of Rear Admiral Bengtson, chief of operations, a great chart of the war game was sketched up and as reports came showing position of the ship, navigators laid out the position. Any information as to the whereabouts of the "red" fleet will be promptly forwarded to Rear Admiral Helm. A strict censorship will be exercised over reports from the defending fleet.

Admiral Mayo's fleet has been authorized to ask passing ships, newspapers and for any other information they may have as to the disposition of the defending forces.

It is not feasible to hurry the railroad executives into a decision, as they had many things to consider.

The counter proposal is expected to be the next step, but there was no outward indication today when it would be taken.

CHURCH IN FRANCE GREATLY DAMAGED

Famous Church of St. Remy, in France, Is Damaged Considerably by Bombardments.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Rheims, France, via Paris, Aug. 22.—An inspection of the famous church of St. Remy shows that it was damaged in numerous places by the recent bombardment. The church, which is a civil hospital, Cardinal Luceon is among those who will remain here.

He was found on Sunday alone and kneeling in prayer on a piece of debris from the cathedral. In spite of the noise of cannonading and progress, the cardinal declared he intended to remain in Rheims and would desert the city under any circumstances.

At the same time Monsignor Gintley, Bishop of Verdun, who since the bombardment of that citadel has been staying at Rheims, celebrated mass in Vassincourt, which was the scene of bloody combat in September, 1914. Ringing of bells joyously announced the Bishop of the Frontiers delivered a stirring address on victory, which he said is "promised and assured."

IRISH STAY AT HOME IMMIGRATION TABLES FOR YEAR DEMONSTRATE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Dublin, Ireland, Aug. 22.—The Irish immigration returns for the first half of 1916 show a still further decrease on the 1915 figures. In the half year there were 3,073 emigrants, which is 988 less than for the corresponding period last year. The decrease is solely due to men, as emigration of women increased by over 500. One hundred and fifty-two emigrants had their passage prepaid to America by the United States government.

ENGLISH RULE GIVES TURKISH CITY BEST ADVANCE IN YEARS

Frontier City of Empire, Captured by English, Shows Rapid Trend Towards Advancement.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Beersa, Mesopotamia, Aug. 22.—This frontier city and river port of Asiatic Turkey, has since its occupation by the British in the present war, enjoyed more prosperity than in twenty years under Turkish rule, says a British eye-witness account.

Beersa is a green spot. It is like an oasis in a great desert. The date palms are festooned with vines which make a canopy, and the trees and pomegranates with scarlet flowers, grow beneath. The very air seems to sweat, the weather is so warm. Strike a match and it will burn dully without a flicker as if the flame were choked.

Beersa was never so rich; money is pouring in, trade is brisk, prices are high. Three banks have opened. The Arabs of the city are learning modern ways; the four new theatres which have sprung up during the war barely meet their demand for entertainment. And they are no longer content with their simple diet of dates and khobez (a coarse bread), but purchase English stores and eat pineapples and salmon and biscuits and butter out of a tin.

The craft on the river are almost as hybrid and varied as the Botsam and jettam of the streets. Here the wattle-roofed shanty hatched on some primeval barge, which is very possibly the latest descendant of Noah's Ark. Next to it is the latest design of motor launch or gunboat. But among all these ships there is one small vessel to which a British soldier will always take off his cap. She is used to ferry snugly against the steeply rising London Bridge. For a penny she would take a passenger to Westminster or others who are doing their part in the war, she has found her own steam.

Senator La Follette has his coterie of speakers, the last to arrive being gentlemen talk about La Follette, but strange to say have nothing to say about national politics or the effect that the Wisconsin senator's vote on the Underwood tariff has on the Wisconsin farmers and manufacturers.

Jeffries is making his last whirlwind tour, talking national politics and hammering home facts on his opponent's vote on national politics. Oestreich is touring the eastern lake shore counties and talking afternoon and evening. And William H. Dougherty is making address in various cities, speaking last night in Milwaukee in Mr. Jeffries' interests.

All three candidates for the gubernatorial office on the republican ticket are explaining their attitude on various questions of importance. Governor Philip being at Stoughton last evening and McGovern at Richland Center.

The following are brief excerpts from addresses of the various speakers now touring the state:

Shaughnessy's Talk.
Pennimore, Wis., Aug. 22.—That the democratic tariff is for the deliberate result of closing American shops and turning American laborers into the streets by encouraging imports, was the declaration made here yesterday afternoon by Leslie M. Shaw, former governor of Iowa and once secretary of the Wisconsin campaign for Charles E. Hughes.

He asserted that farmers and laboring men could be particularly injured by increased imports, for their produce and labor would be in demand. Quoting from Woodrow Wilson's historical writings, he showed that a protective tariff was necessary to save the country from disaster when the Napoleonic wars ended in 1816. He said a similar situation existed today and that a republican administration should be in power to establish the tariff.

Mr. Shaw was introduced by George L. Harrington, candidate for secretary of state, who was presented by the Rev. John Mathias, Lutheran minister. He spoke at Lancaster tonight and will talk in Plattville tomorrow.

Dougherty's Bitter.
Milwaukee, Aug. 22.—"When Senator La Follette abandoned the economic philosophy of the republican party by voting for the Underwood bill, and endorsed the Mexican policy of the Wilson administration, he became a democrat," said William H. Dougherty, Janesville, addressing members of the Malcolm G. Jeffries club here yesterday.

Monday night in the gold room of the Wisconsin Hotel.

"La Follette," said he, "is apparently one of those who recognize no country as their own, as he seems willing to leave unprotected both our soil and our commerce. In the event of an election, we will have the common spectacle of two great parties being represented each by a democrat."

Mr. Jeffries was described as a man who "stands for a strong, national government with power to secure prosperity at home and peace abroad." La Follette was assailed for his position on preparedness.

Need Sound Man.
"The primary election of Sept. 5 calls for the attention of our people some of the most important questions of citizenship that have been presented in a generation," said Mr. Dougherty. "We are now dealing with basic and fundamental principles and not engaged in mere strife for office. Men the world over recognize that economic laws and governmental forms are coming in for the most critical examination. The unsettled world conditions have properly caused us in this country to reflect with more earnestness than common upon our own political situation. In this process we very naturally turn to the most careful scrutiny upon all men who present themselves for service in national way. We want none in this critical juncture who are unsound or unworthy of our highest confidence."

"I believe that the senatorial campaign in this state raises this critical issue in a most clean cut and definite manner. Mr. Jeffries stands for a clean, strong, national government with power to secure prosperity at home and peace abroad. He refuses to throw down the battle industrially that we may find ourselves the victims of a reorganized world commerce. He recognizes that we must be prepared industrially as well as otherwise. In face of the well recognized fact that nothing protects our commerce at the present, but the clash of warring nations, he would prepare as against the day when this barrier will be removed, which all trust will be soon."

Free Trade.
"Our senior senator, however, rejects this philosophy and arrays himself with the theorists of the free trade school. His explanation of his tariff vote is not convincing. He claims he voted for this free trade law to get the income tax. He deliberately deserted the farmers of his own state to achieve this result. He is the lone republican that was offered up to gain this point."

ENGLISH LOST 131 SHIPS
IN JUNE LAST UNDERWRITERS
Liverpool, Aug. 22.—The Liverpool Underwriters association in their capacity return for June, 1916, report that 121 British steam and sailing vessels and 169 foreign vessels were posted in the Loss Book during the month of June—a total of 300 compared with 214 in June, 1915, and 362 in June, 1914. These include minor casualties as well as total losses.

The tonnage of vessels actually lost in June totals 21,993 against 12,770 in June, 1915, and 20,681 in June, 1914. For the six months ending June 30, 1916, 286,813 tons of shipping disappeared against 256,497 in the corresponding period of 1915 and 192,582 in 1914.

DELANEY DEPUTY DOING GOOD WORK

Locates a Missing Boy and Arrests
Another and Clears Mystery of Train Wrecking Attempt.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Andrew Williamson did a neat job of detective work one day last week when he persuaded one of the men who were hired by the C. & N. W. Railroad company to run down the parties fastened to the rails near Burns Crossing, and which was the means of smashing the passenger train going west and nearly derailing the train, to go with him into the neighborhood of the accident and search for the missing boy. He located the boy about two miles from Burns Crossing, and having laid the tie across the track, claiming he became too frightened to remove it after he had placed it there. The boy was taken into custody and awaits the action of the company.

Find Missing Boy.
Officer Williamson last Friday located Charles Hettman, the twelve year old boy who disappeared from his home and who had been in hiding in the cornfields near his home on the Evansville fair last week. He was found without food and three days without sleep. He was taken to his home and secured after dark. He claims he slept in haystacks, and it was in one of these he was found. Charles is now staying with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Utley until the judge comes to a decision in his case.

Mrs. Sophia Wilson Dead.
Mrs. Sophia Wilson passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Wilear, this morning, following a stroke of paralysis. Mrs. Wilson was seventy-nine years of age and leaves to mourn her loss five children, four daughters and one son. The funeral will take place Wednesday at two o'clock from the Wilear home, burial in Spring Grove cemetery.

IDEA OF FITNESS.

Hughes' speech at Detroit was a big gun that had an accurate range upon Washington and the detaching charge that the administration has misused the federal offices to care for the incompetent and the favorite threw the democratic trenches into the wildest confusion.

The department of commerce fired back with a spluttering shrapnel of denial that E. Lester Jones, the director of the coast and geodetic survey, was a veterinarian—but the missile proved to be what the boys call a "sizzer."

The facts are that Dr. Jones was graduated as a horse doctor—and within a year a facsimile of his diploma has been printed in a New York newspaper, together with a reproduction of the doctor's letterhead which he used in the buccic retreat of Culpeper, Virginia, and which stated in unmistakable English that such was one of his callings, at least.

It is also readily recalled here with what vicissitudes the real scientists of the government departments greeted the worthy doctor's first appointment into the federal service as assistant deputy superintendent of the bureau of fisheries. His induction into this post did not seriously agitate the fountains of scientific knowledge in Washington. As an academician then expressed it: "One might, by a stretch of logic, see a certain appropriateness in assigning to a horse doctor to such a position, inasmuch as he could exercise his professional talents in the treatment of ailing sea-horses and sea-cows and in establishing kindergartens for pet catfish and gymnasts for the higher training of dogfish to be used by Josephus Daniels in submarine warfare."

ORDER OR CHAOS?

September fifth, primary day, will tell the tale whether the great state of Wisconsin is to throw off for good and all the domination of the ultra progressive element, return to a safe and sound business policy for the administration of state affairs, select a genuine republican as a candidate for the office of United States senator or return to the administration of former progressive administrators and a standing joke in national republican political affairs. It is up to the voters. Which will it be? Order or chaos?

Malcolm Jeffries stands on a platform truly American, truly republican. There is no question that his nomination and election would give Wisconsin a position in the halls of congress that has not maintained since John C. Spooner resigned and Stephenson retired. His campaign has been clean and concise. He has not had to apologize for his opinion on the tariff, he has demonstrated his endorsement of the candidacy of Charles Hughes for president, and the national republican platform. As a true republican his nomination would be a redemption of the dominating influence of ultra progressive, penance democracy-socialistic—that has controlled state and national affairs for so many years.

Emanuel L. Philipp is a people's governor. His interests are identical with their interests, his thought is to serve them, to reduce the cost of state administration to a minimum without detracting from its efficiency, and to bring order out of chaos. He is a business man who has no patience with political subterfuge. His political enemies are finding it hard work to belittle his work of the past two years and while they misrepresent, make misstatements knowingly and deliberately, the truth will sooner or later be known and it is to be hoped the voters will decide to retain order instead of chaos by renominating him.

Associated with him on the state ticket are such men as Hicks of Oshkosh, Cousins of Eau Claire, Johnson of Madison, and last but not least our own fellow senatorial district candidate, Harrington, of Elkhorn. All are well qualified for the office they seek. All are men working in harmony with Governor Philipp and his ideas. To promote their candidacies means an end to the chaos and order as opposed to chaos and it is to be hoped the voters will look at it that way at the primary polls.

It does not need an invasion of imported orators from Washington to tell the taxpayers and voters of Wisconsin how to cast their ballot. They can think for themselves. They are thinking for themselves and from all parts of the state comes word that they are seeing the light of day at last and are ready to help the state of the incubus of chaos in behalf of order.

TIME FOR PRECAUTION.

An accident which caused the death of the late Henry Burman on Sunday night occurred in many parts of the city if similar conditions exist. Perfectly harmless wires from poles upon which heavily charged tension wires are strung are a menace unless properly safeguarded by proper insulation.

It would appear that the city should exercise supervision in this matter and require a proper inspection of all poles and supports carrying wires that might become dangerous if proper precautions are not taken and require that they be made safe.

Some cities even go farther than this and have an electrical inspector to pass upon all interior wiring, and where it is in operation it has proven successful. Opposition to such a movement would come only from a movement that was afraid that work done would not come up to standard and if that was the fact, all the more reason for such an inspection to safeguard the public.

However, the suggestion of a municipal inspector can come later and in the meantime steps should be taken at once to prevent a repetition of the tragedy of Sunday in which a citizen grasped a supposedly harmless wire and was instantly killed. Installation of proper insulation should be required at once and not delayed until a second death occurs.

CITY PARKS.

When William Penn laid out the city of Philadelphia he followed the ideas of his beloved London of Old England but he varied it somewhat by interspersing public squares, breathing places for the public as it were, every few blocks. Penn built more wisely than he imagined for today, even in the most congested portion of the great City of Brotherly Love, one finds these breathing places still used for the purposes they were dedicated to over two centuries ago.

As the trend of civilization moved westward, new cities sprang up, the idea was forgotten. In fact, the parks and the great breathing spots were neglected. Later came the call for such places and then at great expense they were created. The founders of Janesville, however, laid aside a tract of land for a court house and county building in the center of the city and on the other side of the river created another park. They also left a breathing place in the business section, so that today the city is not without parks, but it still lacks one for recreation purposes.

Madison a few years ago saw the necessity of these places and through the generosity of public-spirited citizens, contributions of others and appropriations by the city itself, has created a wonderful series of parks that encircle the entire city. Even now they contemplate a new one, the initial cost of which will be $21,000.

Janesville is not as rich a community as Madison, but its needs in many respects are identical. Why can't we have a recreation park for the use of the general public. Certainly there are enough beauty spots along the river banks, or in different localities in the city that could be easily converted into ideal pleasure grounds at a small expense.

As the city grows these plots of land will become scarcer and scarcer. The prices will increase until they are prohibitive. Why not look to the future, take time by the forelock and at least make a start in this direction by creating a park board to investigate the cost of purchase, equipping and maintaining such a public playground?

Europe complains because the United States is making a profit out of the war, but that is only the natural result of having ancestors who knew enough to get out of the reach of the European kings.

Many of the girls do not feel well dressed now until they make a liberal display of necks all sunburned to the broiled live lobster hue.

The manufacturers claim that child labor is a good thing, but they don't show the courage of their convictions by labeling their goods, "Made by Child Labor."

Judging by the talk about the Henry Ford factory, the agriculturist will soon be able to cultivate his cornfield without soiling his white flannel trousers.

The political orators promise a reduction in the cost of living, but they fail to give assurance that damage to the crops by weather and insects will be strictly prevented.

vain. That particular spot in the heavens contained nothing it had not contained, namely, a pile of old tin cans, two or three broken down pushcarts and a few goats. It was a very unattractive spot in the heavens. So Prof. Modike rushed indignantly to the John W. Celestial Printing company, makers of the sky maps, with his complaint.

"Oh, that," he was told by John W. Celestial himself. "We're letting the artist sign his name to the maps now—Stizle is his name, and that star is his trademark."

So the professor returned to his breakfast, but the poached eggs were quite cold.

Two Sides.
In life all things are not what they seem.

There's a crooked deal,
And many a man wears an auto cap
Who hasn't an automobile.

We know there's very much deceit
In this old world of toil,
For many a man's name of gasoline
Who is not in Standard Oil.

In all of this cosmic whirl
Our dreams are scattered—blim!
Any man a girl sees the last of a guy
When she fastens a string to him.

No things are not just what they seem,
And many illusions are punk,
For many a woman wears "real"
When everyone knows they are skunk.

roll, although the state department and President Wilson refuse to confirm or deny the report.

Preparedness measures which congress has passed are to be found instances of criminal waste and misappropriation of the public funds. A large part of these is for the purpose of rehabilitating southern navy yards which are virtually obsolete and should be abandoned, for fitting out yards to build ships, when the work could be done far better and more economically by private shipbuilders.

Whatever view may be taken of government manufacture of armaments, under normal circumstances, with gigantic deficit piling up, and private plants thoroughly equipped, offering to manufacture at prices to be fixed, not by themselves but by the government, the expenditure of $50,000,000 for a government plant, which for years must be kept experimental, is worse than folly.

Carranza's Latest: Striking example of Carranza's hatred of foreigners, including Americans, is his latest decree that all foreigners who seek to acquire oil or timber lands, fisheries, water rights, etc., must first obtain citizenship, become Mexican citizens and abandon all rights of protection from their own governments. It is said that the administration will protest as soon as it has received the official text of this decree, but inasmuch as Carranza has always accorded the most contemptuous treatment to President Wilson's every protest, those who have or are seeking the right of citizenship in Mexico have little hope of relief. It must be hoped, however, that European nations will not stand for the high-handed and confiscatory measures of Carranza once the war is over. They would not have stood for them in war and the United States will face serious obstacles to the maintenance of the Monroe Doctrine immediately there is peace in Europe. The now warring nations will demand protection for the persons and respect of the rights of their nationals in Mexico and will insist, if the United States is unwilling to enforce their demands, upon going into Mexico to enforce them themselves.

Bacon a Candidate: New Yorkers generally are considerably interested in the announcement of Robert Bacon's candidacy for the senate. He will oppose former Representative Calder, whose candidacy received the approval of the republican convention. The republican managers view the Bacon candidacy with complacency, as they regard him as a high class man and believe that the anti-primary campaign which will be conducted by Messrs. Calder and Bacon will do much to arouse the voters and to work out serious irreconcilable of who is nominated at the primary. Democratic leaders profess to believe that the Bacon candidacy is the precursor of a serious split in the republican ranks.

Another Strike Threatened: Hardly have New Yorkers settled down to the conviction that they may ride the street cars instead of walk, as so many of them did last week, when they are confronted with the danger of another strike. The unions and the street car heads seem again unable to reconcile their difficulties. The situation appears to be one of the most serious throughout the country.

"Not quite, perhaps; but what I've lost, what I've sacrificed, would have ruined most men. My home is gone, and my family—as you know—yes, and a good many other things you don't know about. Financially I'm not done for—"

"That's too bad."

"Eh? I don't understand. What are you getting at?"

"I'll tell you. I never intended to marry you, Jarvis."

He started as if she had struck him. "That's what I said," she reaffirmed, "and I'll tell you why. Look at me—close."

He did as she directed, but saw nothing, his mind being in chaos. It had been her intention to call Lorelei to witness this dramatic disclosure and thus enhance its effect, but in the excitement of the moment she forgot. "Look at me," she repeated. "I'm Lily Levinski."

"Levinski. A Jew?" he exclaimed, in naive surprise.

"Yes. I'm Joe Levinski's girl. Do you remember?"

"A Jew?" It was plain that the same meant nothing.

She slid down from her perch and approached him, crying roughly, "Don't you remember Joe Levinski?" Hammon shook his head. "He worked for you in the Bessemer mill. Don't you remember?"

"There were four thousand men—"

"He was killed when the converter dumped. You were rushing the work. Do you remember now?" Her words came swift and shrill.

Hammon started; a frown drew his brows together. His mind groped back through the years, and memory faintly stirred, but she gave him no leisure to speak.

"I was waiting outside with his dinner bucket, along with the other women. I saw him go. I saw you kill him—"

"Lilas! Good God, are you crazy?" he burst forth.

"It was murder."

"Murder?"

"It was. You did it. You killed him." She had dropped her cigarette, and it burned a black scar into the rug at their feet. Hammon retreated a step, the girl followed with blazing eyes and words that were hot with hate. "You spilled that melted steel on him, and I saw it all. When I grew up I prayed for a chance to get even. For his sake and for the sake of the other hunkies you killed. You killed my mother, too, Jarvis Hammon, and made me a—"

"Be quiet!" he commanded, roughly. "The thing's incredible—absurd. You—the daughter of one of my workmen—and a Jew!"

"Yes, Levinski—Lily Levinski. And you wanted to marry me," she gibed. "But I fooled you."

"I guess I—must be—out of my head. I never knew the man—there were thousands of them; accidents were common. But—you say—"

He gathered his whirling thoughts, and, strangely enough, grew calm. "You say you prayed for a chance to get even— So, then, you've been nung-bunging— By God, I don't believe it!"

"It's true. It's true. It's true," shrieked the girl so hysterically that her voice roused Lorelei, sitting vacant-eyed in the room down the hall, and brought her to her feet with ears suddenly strained. Lorelei could hear only a part of the words that followed, but the tones of the two voices drew her from her retreat and toward the front of the apartment.

"I knew you," Lilas was saying. "I figured it all out, and—you were easy. You were a bigger fool than I dreamed."

"You took my money—you let me support you!" cried Hammon, in bitter accusation.

"Oh, I did more than that, I planned everything that has happened to you, even that blackmail."

"Blackmail!" he shouted. Did you—was that your—?" He grew suddenly apoplectic; his eyes distended and reddened with rage.

His dismay delighted her.

"Certainly," she smiled. "Half the money is in my bank at this minute—besides all the rest you've given me. Oh, I've got enough to live on without marrying you. Who do you think put your wife wise and gave her the evidence for her divorce, eh? Think it over. Do you remember those letters? You were very indiscreet—and—Your wife will read them and your daughters—"

Jarvis Hammon roused himself at last. Surprise, incredulity, dismay gave place to fury, and, as in all primitive natures, his wrath took shape as an impulse to destroy.

"You'll—do that—eh?" His tone, his bearing were threatening. He advanced as if to seize her in his great hands, and only her quickness saved her.

"Don't touch me!" Her voice ended in a little shriek as she evaded a second effort to grasp her, and placed the table between them. "What do you—" mean?"

But it seemed that she had done her work too well, for his answer was like the growl of a hungry beast. His eyes roved over the table for a weapon, and, reading his insane purpose, she cried again:

"Don't do that. I warn you—"

The nearest object chanced to be a crystal globe in which was set a tiny French clock—one of those library ornaments serving as timepiece and paperweight—over this his hand closed; he moved toward her.

"Put that down," she cried. He did not pause. "Put it—"

She wrenched at the table drawer and fumbled for something. Hammon uttered a bellow and leaped at her.

It was a tiny revolver, small enough to fit into a man's vest pocket or a woman's purse, but its report echoed loudly. The noise came like a cannon shot to the girl in the hall outside, and brought a cry to her lips. Lorelei flung herself against the library door.

What she saw reassured her momentarily, for, although Lilas was at bay against a bookcase, Hammon was rooted in his tracks. A strange, almost ludicrous expression of surprise was on his face; he was staring down at his breast; the revolver lay on the floor between him and Lilas.

Lorelei gasped an incoherent question, but neither of the two who faced each other appeared to hear it or to notice her presence in the room.

"I told you to keep off," Lilas chattered. Her eyes were fixed upon Hammon, but her outflung arms were pressed against the support at her back as if she felt herself growing weak.

"You did it—yourself. I warned you."

The man merely remained motionless, staring. But there was something shocking in the paralysis that held him and fixed his face in that distorted mold of speechless amazement. Finally he stirred; one hand crept inside his waistcoat, then came away red; he turned, walked to a chair, and half fell upon it. Then he saw Lorelei's face, and her agonized question took shape out of the whirling chaos of his mind.

"Where's Bob?" he said, faintly. "Call him, please."

"You're hurt. I'll telephone for a doctor; there's one in the house, and—the police, too." Lorelei voiced her first impulse, then shrilly appealed to Lilas to do something. But Lilas remained petrified in her attitude of retreat; from the pallor that was whitened ing her cheeks now it might have been she who was in danger of death.

"Don't telephone," said Hammon, huskily. "You must do just as I say, understand? This mustn't get out, do you hear? I'm not—hurt. I'm all right, but—fetch Bob. Don't let him call a doctor, either, until I—get home. Now hurry—please."

Lorelei rushed to the outside door, restraining with difficulty a wild impulse to run screaming through the hall. With skirts gathered high and breath sobbing in her throat, the girl fled up the stair to her own door, where she clung, ringing the bell frantically.

She could hear Bob's—her husband's voice inside, raised in the best of humor. Evidently he was telephoning.

"Yes. Two hours ago, I tell you. With book, hell and candle."

Jim's footsteps sounded, his hand opened the door, then his arm flew out to his sister's support as she staggered in.

"Sis! What—" he cried at sight of her.

"Something—dreadful."

Bob continued his cheerful colloquy over the wire. "Say! Here she is now. We'll expect a marble clock with gilt cupids from you, Merkle— 'Want to say hello?' He lurched aside from the telephone as Lorelei snatched the receiver from his hand.

"Mr. Merkle," she cried.

"Hello! Yes. Is that you?" came Merkle's steady voice.

"Come quick—quick."

"What's wrong?" he demanded, with a sharp change of tone. "Has Bob—?"

"No, no. It's Mr. Hammon. He's downstairs with—Lilas, and he's hurt—shot. I—I'm frightened."

She turned to find Bob and Jim staring at her.

"Come," she gasped. "I think he's—dying."

She led the way swiftly, and they followed.

CHAPTER XV.

Merkle found his chauffeur just closing the garage door, and three minutes later his car was sweeping westward through the park like the shadow of some flying bird. The vagueness, the brevity of the message that had come to him out of the night made it terribly alarming. Jarvis Hammon's financial interests were in no condition to withstand a shock; for a long time many of them had been under fire. He had committed his associates to a program of commercial expansion, never too secure even under favorable conditions, and one, moreover, which had provoked a tremendous assault from rival steel manufacturers. Now, with Hammon himself stricken at the crisis of the struggle, there was no telling what results might follow.

But Merkle's apprehensions were by no means purely selfish. Hammon and he had been friends for many years; they shared a mutual respect and affection, and, although Merkle was eminently practical and unemotional, he prayed now as best he could that Hammon might not be grievously injured.

As the machine drew up to the Elegancia, Jimmy Knight leaped to the running board and said hurriedly: "Send your driver away."

Merkle did as he was directed, realizing his worst fears. When he and Jim stood alone on the walk he inquired weakly, "Is he—dead?"

Jim shook his head, and Merkle saw that he was deeply agitated. "No. But he's got a bullet in his chest."

Together the men entered the building and at the first ring were admitted to Apartment No. 1 by Lorelei herself. She led them straight into the library. Perhaps a quarter of an hour had elapsed since the shooting, but Jarvis Hammon still sat in the big chair. He was breathing quietly. Bob Wharton stood beside him.

You Can Secure the Help You Need TOMORROW

Good help is plentiful in Janesville, it is just a question of using the RIGHT method to secure the particular person you want.

Depending upon the recommendation of other employes to fill a vacancy, is frequently unsatisfactory. But a "Help" ad in the Gazette INvariably brings you many desirable applicants from whom you can pick a good man or woman.

The Janesville Daily Gazette is read thoroughly by almost every English reading person in this vicinity. If a vacancy occurs suddenly, it need not cause you any particular inconvenience.

A GAZETTE WANT AD WILL SOLVE THE PROBLEM

Proof of this statement is shown in the letter below:

Gazette: The ad that was inserted for a girl wanted proved a great success. I had 10 calls before 7:30 but had hired the girl at 5 o'clock that afternoon. Lots more are waiting to receive the positions offered in the Want Ad Columns—so don't wait too long—DO IT NOW—IT PAYS.

Dinner Stories

Johnny had just started learning history and very proud of himself he was. One evening, as he sat studying his lesson, he thought he would test his grandfather's knowledge of the subject, so he asked:

"Grandpa, do you know what great war broke out in 1850?"

The old man raised his head from the evening paper and looked thoughtfully at the lad. Then a sudden light came into his eyes.

"Why," said he, "that was the year I married your grandmother!"

"And what did you learn at school today?"

"Oh, all about the myths and goddesses and things."

"I don't know," replied Mr. Cummox. "But I'm not worrying. When I get through with the stock tickers downtown, I don't propose to come home and study a new line of market quotations."

Old Lady—I want to get 10 cents' worth of stamps.

The New Clerk—What denomination?

Old Lady—I'm a Baptist, but I don't see as it's any of your business.

"Is your wife fond of athletics?"

"Not at all. She just wears that sport suit because she thinks she looks cute in it."

Mesmerism and Hypnotism. You may say that "mesmerism" is a form of hypnotism, or you may, with equal propriety, say that "hypnotism" is a form of mesmerism. It is as broad as it is long. Mesmerism is so-called from the fact that it first sprang into prominence through one F. A. Mesmer, a German physician of Merseburg, about 1730. The name mesmerism has in these days been eclipsed by the more familiar hypnotism.
